“ Aunt Laura, Uncle Don and the kids came to Liberty Center for Sunday dinner. Cousin Rick and I rode our bikes over to the school, complaining about the end of summer vacation and the start of homework. Since Rick was 5 years older than me, I viewed him to be quite wise about school stuff. He told when I got to high school, I would have to write 500-word compositions. Just the thought of it made me feel sick to my stomach. Ugh! Rick was pretty smug about having accomplished these feats. I felt weak and dreaded the whole idea. (100 words)

I could write another 400 words about Rick, but I don't think my words would do him justice or capture everything that made him who he was or to be able to tell what he meant to his family and friends.

Rick was adventurous.

Rick was kind.

Rick could be ornery.

Rick was a kind soul.

Rick was LOVED.

Love, LeAnn

“ I was in school with Eric and he was always a quiet one. Never a classroom problem. I LOVED when he would share his Mama's marzipan candies with us. Rest In Peace, Eric.
