“ Mike was really the last of my father’s best friends and hunting partners. I see him, his knife shop in his barn, as the glue that kept a bunch of good ol boys, and young ones too, in touch with each other for so many years. As such, I was beholden to keep that relationship alive after my dad passed. As such, I tried when I could when visiting from my home in Alaska, to stop in for a “visit” with Mike. From the first time, and from many memories, I knew who he was and what a great friend. His passing means so much more than the beer and coffee splattered photos that are on the wall of shame at his shop. God Bless, Lynn!
